Site 48FR2254, Because we may not have many chances to see emerging inequalities in the region due to preservation issues, we might look to other examples where a religious practitioner like a shaman is responsible for subsistence and the specialized architecture accompanying this role.

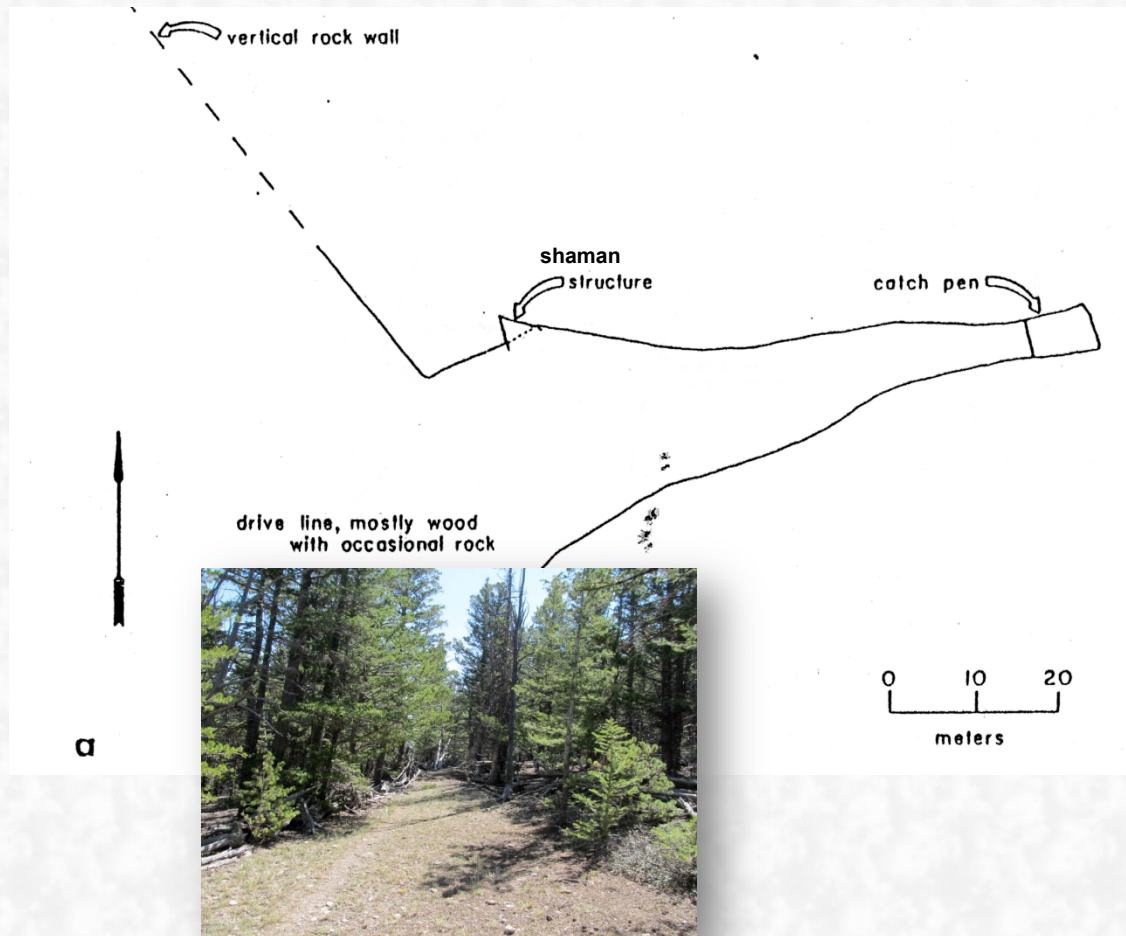

e.g., shaman huts built into big horn sheep traps

Site 48FR2253, ca. A.D. 1800, Shoshone, consider George Frison's recent statement, "I think people underestimate the amount of ritual activity that goes on with this kind of thing," speaking about the function of "shaman huts" built into Wind River Range bighorn sheep traps (personal communication, 2013).
